Stackhouse, Northampton township, who left a personal estate of $1,000 and real estate valued at $18,000, bequeathed the residue of seven beneficiaries, Harvey S. and J. Edwin Stackhouse, Esther L. Weir, Herman R. and Harvey L. Stackhouse, and Margaret Joan and Boris Esther Weir.

The will was executed Feb. 22, 1945, and the real estate consists of 77 acres on Poorhouse road, Northampton township. Harvey S. Stackhouse, Ivyland, R. D., and Esther L. S. Weir, Richboro, were named executors.

Individual beneficiaries included John Stackhouse and Harvey Weir, who were bequeathed Christmas trees; Esther L. Weir, Harvey L. Weir and Margaret Joan Weir, all of whom received personal possessions, including silverware and heirlooms. The testatrix died March 9.

Markley and Eugene Markley. In addition to being named one of the residuary heirs, Mary Long was bequeathed an additional $500. The testatrix, who made his will May 26, 1938, died March 21. Re-Elect Walter Miller As Adult School Head

Walter Miller was re-elected president of the Bristol Adult School for the coming year at the reorganization meeting held last evening in the Bristol high school cafeteria.

Miller told those present that the purpose of the meeting was to elect officers and directors for the coming year and to lay the ground work for the fall term of the school.

The officers elected were as follows: President, Walter Miller; vice president, Joseph Roos; secretary, Mrs. Earl McEuen; treasurer, Miss Clara King.

It was announced by Miller that the last term of the school was a success and it was hoped that the coming term would be a bigger success next year. A lot of interest was shown by the people taking the courses and many stated their desire to take more courses.

The group decided that the officers should get together and pick their committees as soon as possible, so the work for the next term can be started.

Inside Your Congress

The Strange Case of Wallace and Wallace

—BY—
SAMUEL B. PETTINGILL
"The Gentleman from Indiana"

Can it be that this man Wallace is the same man who might have been President of the United States today? Did Franklin Delano Roosevelt, our great leader, once select him above all other Americans to be Vice-President? Was he, in fact, Vice-President and just two heartbeats from the Presidency? Did he, in fact, lead on the first ballot for renomination in 1947?

I rub my eyes. For somebody by the name of Wallace is now being set upon by Democrats as a near-Judas to the faith.

No, this can't be the man who was once praised as the prophet of the Century of the Common Man. The common man, according to polls of public opinion, now wants him to live in some other century, or in some other country.

One is simply forced to accept the view that there is a mistake somewhere. There must be a number of Henry A. Wallaces in this country.

However, it is interesting to reflect upon the thought that it might be the same man. Suppose the Tall Corn Wallace, who once killed pigs, were President right now, and were opposing the effort to keep Russia from the Dardanelles. Do you know what would happen? Why, the same Democrats now in full cry on his heels would be baying his praise with happy yelps. "Good old Henry! How wise he is! Look at those pro-

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

Despite disagreements and difficulties, "some progress, however painfully slow" was made at the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Moscow, Secretary Marshall reported to the nation over the radio last night. He disclosed that in his conference with Premier Stalin the Russian leader had reminded him that "these were only the first skirmishes and brushes" and that after talk had been exhausted "the necessity of compromise" would become apparent. Secretary Marshall said he hoped that the Premier was right, but pointed out that "the patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate." Secretary Marshall was critical of Russian tactics and "propaganda appeals to passion and prejudice."

Henry A. Wallace stood by everything he had said against this country's foreign policy and declared it was too soon to tell whether he would support President Truman should the latter be a candidate for re-election. Harold E. Stassen said that the United States could assure world peace if it "remains strong and follows wise and humanitarian policies" toward all other nations.

The President's request for $350,000,000 for post-UNRRA relief for liberated countries met new demands in the House for restrictions on the amount and the allocation.

A pact patterned after a Pan-American convention that seals all frontiers in the event of civil war has been recommended by the United States as a means of controlling incidents on Greece's borders with her Balkan neighbors.

The special session of the United Nations General Assembly called to consider the Palestine problem met in Flushing Meadow and, after organization, adjourned until tomorrow. Dr. Aranha of Brazil was elected President. Slam took her seat as the 55th member, and seven vice-presidents were chosen. A General Committee was then completed, and it will meet today to draw up an agenda.

No leader of the Jewish Agency was present at the opening session. Both Zionist and Arab groups planned their opposing strategies for today's General Committee meeting. Difficulties mounted for Britain at home. Thousands of London dockworkers quit work in sympathy with Glasgow strikers, and Food Minister Strachey was besieged by housewives demanding price and ration relief.

Congress party leaders conceded for the first time in the Constituent Assembly that India might be forced to divide into Moslem and Hindu areas.

WHOSE TAXES TO CUT?

President Truman and the Democratic braintrusts at Washington have been fighting a losing battle to keep the Republican majorities in Congress from passing any tax-reduction bill this year.

Having lost—rather badly—their original argument that all Federal appropriations were so "pure" they couldn't be trimmed without damage, and having been forced recently to concede that present tax levels are too high even for the greatly inflated rate of Federal spending, they have been driven to seek new means of delay.

For this reason there has been much effort made to show that the House tax-cut program greatly favors the rich. This is technically true in the number of dollars involved, but wholly false otherwise.

The original Republican tax pledge was for a 20 per cent income tax slash "across the board." That is, every tax payer, rich or poor, would keep one dollar in five of the taxes he now pays.

In ratio, of course, that is perfectly fair. But there has been a build-up in this country for the Socialist idea that only the rich should pay taxes, and the "poor" be made exempt. Great Britain, frightful as is her economic plight, nevertheless exempted a new group of taxpayers in her recent budget, and cut down the amount paid by great numbers of others in the low-income bracket.

This is part of the Marxian idea of "redistributing wealth." Several things are wrong with the concept. In the first place, everybody who enjoys the benefit of a Government ought to be willing to help support it—from each according to his ability. Where great programs of security insurance are set up for the benefit of the low-income groups, it certainly should not be asking too much to demand they help support them whenever able.

In the second place, unless they do help to support it, the whole system of economy is bound to fail. That's what's the matter in England.

In England, so much so-called social "security" has been set up for the individual that the economic security of the country is tottering. John Bull has simply assumed more of a financial burden than the British people can carry. And despite this, instead of raising taxes on those who are supposed to get the benefit, they are being exempted.

PLAN TO SUE TO HALT CLOSING OF ACADEMY

Phila. Attorney Says He Will File Suit in Dauphin County Tomorrow

OUTLINES HIS REASONS

In an effort to forestall closing of the Pennsylvania Maritime Academy at Morrisville, a suit is to be filed today in Dauphin County Court, Harrisburg, by Howard M. Long, attorney for Robert A. Maguire, president of the Vessel Owners and Captains Associations. The action will be taken "as a tax payer and on behalf of others of similar interests," it is declared.

It is to be a suit in equity and filed against Milo F. Draemel, State Secretary of Forests and Waters, who ordered the academy to close, transfer its present 45 cadets to other schools and return the schoolship Keystone State to the U. S. Maritime Commission.

Long, who said he was speaking for Maguire, asserted that Draemel's order was viewed by its opponents as "the first step in a crusade to wipe out all State nautical schools, including those in Maine, Massachusetts, New York and California, and substitute for these democratic State institutions a brass-hat national academy under military control."

"It is my well-considered opinion," Long added, "that the Navigation Commission's action on Friday is a direct violation of the mandate of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania and a direct and premeditated violation of the oaths of office taken by the Commissioners."

Maguire, the plaintiff, said that although he had instituted the suit as an individual, his association, the oldest of its type in Philadelphia, "already has sent resolutions to Governor James H. Duff opposing the closing of the academy."

The suit, he said, names as defendants Draemel and the six other commission members: Edwin R. Cox, Director of Wharves and Ferries here; G. Coe Farrier, William K. Johnson, E. J. McGinnis, William D. Mason, and John S. Roberts, Jr.

Draemel is ex-officio member by virtue of his State office, and Cox is a member by virtue of Philadelphia.

Robert M. Schultz Discusses Full-Time Recreational Set-Up for Borough

CITES OTHER CITIES

For the second consecutive month the main topic of discussion at a session of the Community Workshop last evening was the value of and possibility of securing for Bristol a full-time recreational director or coordinator.

At this, the final meeting of the Workshop held in the municipal building, Robert M. Schultz, director of recreation for the city of Chester, was the speaker. Mr. Schultz informed of recreational set-ups in three other cities, and discussed with Workshop members and others present the possibilities for a similar program in Bristol borough.

At a session of the Workshop held on March 24th, following a similar presentation of the subject by another guest, members of borough council and Bristol school board attending had been asked to present the matter to their respective bodies, all interested to re-assemble this month and hear reports from members of those groups as to any proposed solution.

No reports were presented from those two groups last evening. Burgess Jacob C. Schmidt informed the gathering that the Bristol Recreation Board is proceeding as quickly as possible with the work at the park, the board being hampered to date in having work carried out and in receiving supplies ordered months ago. Burgess Schmidt reported.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Tribute To Three Bosses

Washington, April 29. NOT often is it possible to say anything pleasant about the political bosses of the big city machines. Usually they are sordid, not to say sinister, fellows to whom it would be pretty difficult to be unjust. The idea that the nation as a whole owes them a real debt of gratitude appears almost too ridiculous to present seriously.

NEVERTHELESS, that happens to be the fact, and nothing could possibly make it clearer than the recent performance of that whirlwind dervish of public affairs, Mr. Henry Wallace—now about to return from Europe, where he has done his gaudy best to scuttle the foreign policy of his own country while it is engaged in extremely vital negotiations. For the incontrovertible truth is that but for these bosses Mr. Wallace today would be President of the United States.

LET those who think we should not be grateful to these bad bosses of Chicago, Jersey City and New York, who frightened the late Mr. Roosevelt away from renominating Mr. Wallace as his running mate in 1944, consider that trenchant fact. Let them reflect upon Mr. Wallace's present views as expressed in his British speeches. Let them reflect, too, upon his opposition to the American plan for control of atomic energy as presented by the Baruch committee to the Security Council of the United Nations. Let them consider also the kind of Secretary of State we now would have if Mr. Wallace were President and what

RECREATION PARK FIELD OPENED BY BORO' OFFICIALS

Flag is Raised and First Ball Game, After the Official Opening, is Played

SEN. GRUNDY SPEAKS

Pres't of Council, Charles G. Rathke, Aids Burgess In Raising Flag

Bristol's Memorial Park field went into service last night when it was officially opened by Bristol's borough, president of borough council, recreation board, and the donor of the site.

A flag was raised and the first baseball game to be officially played on the park site got under way with the Rohm and Haas and Hibernian teams competing.

Assembled at a newly erected flag pole were a number of borough officials, members of the Recreation Board, representative clergy and spectators.

In calling the group to order Louis C. Spring, chairman of the recreation board, introduced the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James' Church and dean of the Bristol Ministerium, who offered prayer.

Burgess Jacob C. Schmidt was then presented and speaking briefly said: "I am proud to say a few words on this happy occasion. This evening the American flag is to be raised for the first time over this new War Memorial Recreation Park. This evening the grounds are to be put to their first official use with the playing of the baseball game you are waiting to see."

"This is just the beginning. The game tonight is the first of many. It is our hope that the young people of generations to come will find pleasure on these grounds. The time will soon be here when athletic fields like this will be finished all over the park, and when sports and play of a dozen kinds can be going on at once."

"There have been many delays. Of all the things in history, I don't suppose there has ever been more difficult year to get things done. That's something I don't have to tell you about. Everyone has noticed it in their own affairs. But with the opening of this field, I think we have passed the hump and will have easier going in the future."

"I am glad on this occasion to extend the thanks of Bristol to Senator Grundy, whose generosity made this Park possible. I want, also, to extend our thanks to the Recreation Board which has been able to bring the improvements along to the point where they can be put in use tonight."

WHOSE TAXES TO CUT?

In the third place, there is a lot of confusion about who really pays taxes, and about the possibility of exempting low-income groups. Taxes come out of profits, and profits come out of price. When you buy a man's products, you are helping pay his taxes. The heavy purchases which are made by low-income groups necessarily help cover the taxes of the corporations and individuals who made the goods. The lower the tax rate, the lower the prices.

High taxes make high prices for exactly that reason. What's the good of a program which "exempts" a low-income family from paying income taxes—and then forces them to pay still higher taxes indirectly when they buy the necessities of life?

The original Republican "across the board" program, however, made some concessions to current Socialist concepts. The 20 per cent reduction was increased to 30 per cent for the lower brackets; and for a handful of the top incomes, was tapered off to a smaller figure. Some minor adjustments in exemptions followed the same pattern.

It is difficult to see what real fault can be found with this 30-20 tax-cut program. Nevertheless, the Democrats continue trying to convince the bulk of the American people that they ought to turn down a cut in their taxes simply because somebody else, with a much larger income, will get a reduction which, although the same or less in percentage, will naturally be more in dollars.

President Truman, in his New York address, took a sly dig at the GOP tax program when he said that, when and if he decides the time is ripe for a tax cut, "it should then be extended to those who need relief most."

Well, let's see about that. Who is it who needs tax relief the most? The President himself says full production is the only hope of prosperity and normal times. What's holding up production? High taxes. Taxes that discourage venture capital. Taxes that eat up so much profits it's hardly worth while to go after them. Taxes that have driven prices up and up, so that the nation is on the threshold of a "buyers' strike" (eggged on by the President) which will make the situation still worse.

Who is it that is tax-poor? It is the people who have put up the money, under our free-enterprise economy, which made millions of well-paid jobs possible, which created the industrial strength to win the war, and who have the initiative and know-how—if the bureaucrats will let them—to plunge ahead into new success and expansion.

Enterprise and initiative have been taxed almost out of existence in this country. If we ever are going to reverse the trend, now is the time. What's the use of trying to call this a "land of opportunity" if success is going to be punished so severely no one will want it. Is anyone really childish enough to think that those who have energy and vision and patience aren't going to always live better than those who are lazy and improvident—for all the nonsense of Socialism?

We are at the crossroads.

The Stock Exchange, barometer of the hopes and expectations of industry, has been sagging for months.

Factory hiring, a sure index of the plans of manufacturing for its immediate future, dropped to the lowest February average in six years.

Surveys of money expected to be invested this year in new plants and new equipment, just completed by the Department of Commerce and the Securities Exchange Commission, reveal the startling fact that they are "leveling off"—that is, that less rather than more is to be spent in the immediate future than during the last half of last year.

The figures are interesting. Such investments ran $7,000,000,000 for the last half of 1946. They are estimated to be no higher at present, and to be due to decline in the last half of this year. The total predicted for the year (and these two agencies are more apt to err on the optimistic than the pessimistic side) is $13,900,000,000.

Considering the magnitude of the investment in American industry, the vast depreciation during the war, the great need for large output in new fields, the immense foreign demand, and the huge sums of venture capital lying idle in this country, this figure is fantastically small.

It ought to be near $50,000,000,000 than $14,000,000,000—and would be, if the red light hadn't been flashed from the White House by such basically unfriendly and threatening remarks as the one quoted above.

Before this nation can ever again become reasonably prosperous—and certainly before it can ever again enjoy a fair amount of economic security—there is going to have to be a revolution in the thinking of those in charge of national affairs.

Business turnover and industrial activity are the basis of our success. Important as farming is, this is not an agricultural nation primarily; and the farmers will stand or fall with our industrial empire.

Over-taxation destroying the profit incentive, and tax policies which strangle industrial expansion, are forms of national suicide.

phetic eyes, those brooding eyebrows, that boomerang right arm!"

Or suppose his great friend, Mr. Roosevelt, were still President, and "Hawkeye" Henry were making the same speeches that somebody named Wallace is making today.

How many of those Democratic Senators and Congressmen, now red with rage, would utter a peep then? Few, indeed. Only a few would stand on principle and discuss the Greek loan or anti-Russian policy as worthy of high debate by free men seeking truth.

This man Wallace raises the question: "What would Roosevelt do today?" Wallace claims that he carries the true torch; that Truman has become an apostate to the faith of the great leader. Is he right or wrong?

Until the State Department releases to public gaze all the correspondence and notes of talks between Roosevelt and Stalin, we are left in the dark. Why should we be left in the dark? Why does Truman keep this information bottled up? Truman is either pro-Roosevelt or anti-Roosevelt on this matter.

Another reflection is a sad one. It points to the low level to which government has come. Our forefathers would not howl that Truman's message on Greece established a policy wherein no dog may bark. They would call it by its true name, a proposal for discussion. They would not claim it was a "policy" until Senate and House had approved the proposal, as they are about to do.

The new idea is ominous. It is that whenever a very fallible man proposes something of vast importance, it immediately becomes a "policy" which forecloses public discussion. Even Senator Vandenberg says that once proposed, it must be supported. A more effective way to freeze one-man rule on this country would scarcely be suggested. It is the "follow the leader" principle by which Hitler and Mussolini led their people to destruction.

Overseas, this man Wallace is believed to be an ex-Vice-President. This gives an undesired importance to his words. To debate domestic issues on foreign soil shows poor judgment and rotten taste. But if he were here, where his words would be appraised at their true value, his right to his say would have to be defended by every American who really believes in free speech.

there would be anywhere, including here, to stop the spread of communism in the world.

NEVER mind about their motives. No matter that they were undoubtedly animated by their inherent and incurable political selfishness. No matter that they did not know from what they were saving the country and had no notion they were saving it at all. Fully considering all these things, the fact remains that few men in our history have rendered better service to the nation than that trio of more or less unsavory city bosses who swung Mr. Roosevelt away from Mr. Wallace in the 1944 Democratic convention and induced him to send word down the line for another candidate.

ONE of these bosses was Mr. Eddie Kelly, then mayor of Chicago, and in that day a very dominant man politically, indeed. The second was that ruthless, battle-scarred and widely denounced Mayor of Jersey City, Mr. Frank Hague. The third was Mr. Roosevelt's close friend, Mr. Eddie Flynn, the highly cultured boss of the Bronx. It was the emphatically expressed view of these gentlemen that Mr. Wallace's renomination would weaken the ticket very greatly. He might, they urged, cost it a million votes in the big cities. He might cause its defeat. He ought not to be named.

WIDELY published at the time, these things have rather faded from the general memory now. Nevertheless, they caused Mr. Roosevelt to ditch his first choice, Mr. Wallace, and secure the field for a new running mate, eventually settling on the then Senator Truman. It is not likely that, with the war on, these bosses thought Mr. Wallace could really drag Mr. Roosevelt down to defeat. It is likely they thought he would make the fight a little harder for them in their particular bidwicks. And, certainly, they had a strong personal distaste for him and the pink and red following anyhow.

UNBOURDEDLY, but for them, he would not only have been renominated but re-elected. There is no record in American political history either of the weakness of a vice-presidential candidate defeating the ticket, or of his strength electing it. Under our system it is impossible to vote for the presidential candidate without voting for his running mate. With the voters, it is the head of the ticket that counts. The personality and record of the vice-presidential candidate become matter of unimportance. Neither the geographical reasons for a vice-presidential nomination nor his home state popularity ever has gained or lost the ticket a state it would not have gained or lost with another man.

IT IS impossible to find any competent politician in either party today who believes the Wallace nomination in 1944 would have affected the result; practically without exception they agree that if those three city bosses had not forced Mr. Roosevelt to change his mind, the Mr. Wallace so recently galloping around foreign lands, misrepresenting the purposes of his country, would be President Wallace, sitting in the White House making both foreign and domestic policy according to his own three-thumbed, twelve-fingered, web-footed ideas.

SO, when one considers what these men averted, there is a disposition to forgive them for all the sins they have committed in the past and any they might commit in the future. What difference does it make that they were not patriotically inspired? Nevertheless, they had a sure instinct. Perhaps a concrete medal or memorial would be neither fitting nor feasible. But when the temptation again is felt to pass harsh judgment upon these three hard-boiled practitioners of politics on the lower levels, the mitigating thought might occur that unwittingly they did save us from a national disaster.

Here's a strong "case" for title insurance right from the Court Records.

Recently, workmen—armed with a Court Order, saws and pick-axes—chopped 7½ feet off a woman's house because it encroached on her neighbor's property. All told, the owner lost sixty square feet of land and her home was wrecked. The whole tragedy was the result of a mix-up in her deed, due to a defective title somewhere along the line.

When you buy a home, make sure you own it. Ask your real estate broker or attorney to arrange for title insurance through Land Title. One modest premium insures your property as long as you continue to own it.

gress this spring, however, and named that the Memorial Park is officially opened last evening, ending a baseball game on one of the diamonds.

Last evening's session of the workshop was opened by Mrs. Ed Goslin, she turning the meeting over to Miss Rose Cologne, specialist in adult education and teacher of the Workshop. Miss Cologne introduced Mr. Schultz.

Mr. Schultz outlined the type of programs of recreation he has conducted in three different cities, including that a full-time recreational program in any community does not exist entirely of strenuous games, also includes hobbies, clubs, and the like. "Recreation is something people do with their spare time. The reasons for organizing for the purpose of recreation so that people might do things with other people, and mingle and be with those who have interests common."

As regards young people Mr. Schultz said: "They need some direction and guidance to get in the right channel, so they will become interested in things constructive."

"We must remember that recreation is the outgrowth of the needs and interests of all people of the community."

The guest reminded that by means of a survey outlining a plan of recreation program learn what people want and enjoy. "The next question is 'Where can they participate?' and another question is 'How can the plan be financed?'" At this juncture Mr. Schultz told at first the recreational needs must be found, a survey then made of existing facilities, and a method outlined for financing the program. He explained the legal set-up, here, by means of existing laws, money can be secured locally and from the Commonwealth. "Enabling legislation covers all townships, boroughs and cities. It gives the officials authority to appoint a recreation board, tieing such in with the school board; said recreation board empowered to hire personnel, estimate the budget, and carry out the program. Thus a spirit of co-operation is manifest between the school board and borough council, here is an act permitting the school boards to set up a program of recreation for out-of-school youth and adults."

After reiterating the information given on financing methods presented the group last month, Mr. Schultz said "There is something about a town where people play together that makes for a contented community. . . . And a community can buy in recreation just what it is willing to pay for. We pay lots of money for penal institutions to care for miscreants after the damage is done, but we pay very little for recreation to prevent damage. Planned recreation is citizenship insurance."

After reminding that in this "assembling-line age," where many people do the same task all day long, day after day, Mr. Schultz spoke of the value of "an outlet for creative powers" found in a planned community recreation program. "There is a certain amount of drudgery to everyday jobs for many people. That is why people enjoy hobbies, working with their hands and actually creating something in its entirety; or playing with others who have like interests. There is great value to a full-time, year-round community recreation program."

The gathering was informed that there are very few communities following the suggested plan which find it necessary to spend more than $3 per capita per year, many spending as little as $1.50 to $2. "Where can you go, for $2 to $3 a year, and have something to occupy your time, attention and free hours every afternoon or evening in the week if you wish. So you see, after all, it's a small amount of money that is required for such a program."

Planned recreational activities in Reading, Allentown and Chester were mentioned. Reading's annual budget for such being $48,000; and Chester's this year for 65,000 population being $47,000. "The school boards furnish the buildings, play areas, heat and light," commented the speaker. "If we can't get together in our own communities how can we expect to get together internationally?" he queried. "The program, however, must come from the people themselves."

The consensus of opinion, following a period of questions, was that the prime need for a well-rounded recreation program is a full-time recreation director, "who can coordinate the work and tap the resources of the community."

Mrs. Goslin informed Mr. Schultz of the new recreation park now being built here; Burgess Schmidt outlined plans for said park. Certificates were presented the Workshop members who have attended six of the eight sessions this season. Mrs. Goslin announced that a session of Workshop members of the past two years will be called in June, the general plan being to continue working through the Bristol Chamber of Commerce.

Philadelphia post. McGinnis and Mason were appointed by the Governor to represent Delaware county, and Roberts was named to represent Bucks county. The other two were named by the Mayor to represent Philadelphia.

It was learned, meanwhile, that Farrier, who is an assistant City Solicitor in Philadelphia, and Roberts teamed up at Friday's meeting in an attempt to rescind Draemel's order, but were voted down by Cox, Johnson and Mason. Draemel, as commission president, does not vote unless there is a tie. McGinnis was absent.

After Admiral Draemel first ordered the Academy closed, earlier this year, work was halted on the proposed $6,000,000 land base at Morrisville. Part of the $2,000,000 already appropriated for the project has been spent, but Draemel has stated that much of that expenditure can be salvaged.

Draemel has claimed repeatedly that support of the Academy is a "waste of taxpayers' money," that the cost per student is too high, and that prospective cadets from this State can obtain adequate training elsewhere.

Three Phila. Men Are To Be Tried for Andalusia Robbery

Three young men, aged 29 and 21, all residents of Philadelphia, are to be brought back to Bucks County to answer to the charge of breaking and entering into the premises of an Andalusia beer distributor and taking two cases of beer.

The trio is now in the custody of Philadelphia police and will be turned over to Chief Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and State Police today.

The men are identified by police as Paul Thierry, 21, Edmond street; George Harris, 21, Longshore street; Howard Schenn, 29, Longshore street.

The men are charged with entering the property of Edward Lucas, Andalusia, on April 26th, at about five o'clock in the morning and taking two cases of beer.

Today Russo and State Troopers Carfagno and Dape will go to Philadelphia to bring the men back to Bucks County.

Gas Almost Choked Him

ERB-HELP is the new mixture of 12 Juices from Nature's Herbs. It has relieved many people who had never been really helped before by any medicine. Taken shortly before meals it mixes with your food, thus eliminating the poisons that foster stomach trouble. It will cleanse the bowels, clear gas from stomach, enliven liver and remove old, sickening bile from the system. So don't go on suffering! Get Erb-Help. Sold by All Drug Stores here in Bristol. Recreation Park Field Is Opened by Boro' Officials

Former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, donor of the site and $25,000 for its conditioning and equipment, was presented and said that he sympathized with the recreation board in the delays they had had in their endeavor to develop the park site. "I appreciate the courtesy in being invited here this beautiful evening and upon this occasion," he said.

Then recalling the days of his youth Mr. Grundy said that the baseball field brought back to his memory the days when he was active in the sport. "You may not think so by my portly figure now," he jovially said. "But in the 1870's I played with the old Keystone nine of which George Wright was a star player, along with William Downing, and Tom Murray."

Senator Grundy said that when he was sent by his parents to Swarthmore College, he became captain of the baseball team and football team during the time that he was a student there.

Burgess Schmidt and President of Council, Charles G. Rathke, stepping to the base of the flag pole began slowly raising the flag as the color guard of the Bracken Post Cadets snapped to attention and buglers sounded the call to colors. As the flag unfurled dozens of small flags floated to the ground and were eagerly sought by the children.

There was benediction by the Rev. Albert M. Glass, assistant rector of St. Mark's church.

The gathering then adjourned to the baseball diamond at the other end of the field and David Landreth, member of the recreational board, tossed out the first ball and the game started.

Mr. Landreth said that it afforded him much pleasure to open the 1947 baseball season. "It has been stated that this is the 21st season of the league," said Mr. Landreth, "but I think that is a mistake. I was president of the League 20 years ago and then Thomas Juno succeeded me. I think this is about the 25th year. I think that Bristol should have a fine team this year with so many players out and the fine grounds that you have to play on."

The Badenhausen Corporation, Cornwells Heights, has donated two flagpoles to Bristol Borough for erection on the Memorial field.

In addition to the one put into use last night, the other one is to be erected at the tennis courts and kiddies play area.

CERVELLERO HIT BY LINE DRIVE IN FIRST GAME

Rohm & Haas Moundman Struck by Ball from Bat of Breslin

HIBERNIANS LOSE OUT Chemical Mixers Win The Opening Game By Score of 7 to 6

Following the dedication exercises of the Memorial Park field last evening, the fans were treated to an exciting ball game when the Rohm and Haas team came from behind to beat out the Hibernians, 7-6.

The Hibernians took a 6-0 lead in the first inning and then proceeded to "throw away" the ball game as they committed eight errors. The "Hiboes" out-hit the chemical mixers, 10-5, but seven of those ten hits were made in the first inning.

The winning markers were scored in the fourth when Harrison reached base on an error and was forced by Hetherington. Hetherington stole second and went to third as Hetherington was being thrown out. Hetherington scored on a short passed ball. DeWitt and Ludwig walked and in between Dick had a single to lead the bags. Fisher tapped to Cahill who threw low to first. DeWitt scoring but when Dick also tried to score, he was nipped at the plate. Cahill to Mount.

"Johnny" Dick was the winning moundman, he relieving Paul Cervellero in the first, the latter being injured when struck by a batted line drive from the bat of Breslin. Joe Snyder was the losing pitcher.
